
Notes on contributors

Mariavita Cambria holds a PhD in English and American Studies from the University of Catania, and is a tenured researcher in English Language and Linguistics, Faculty of Arts, University of Messina. She has published on multimodal analysis, corpus linguistics and language testing. Her life-long interest in Irish studies – she has an MPhil from Trinity College Dublin – is reflected in her volume Irish English. Language, History, Society. She is currently preparing a volume (The Multimodal Analysis of Online Newspapers, London, Equinox) on the study of genre differences in online newspapers which, with its exploration of the effects of digital technologies on the language of news-making, brings together the main findings of her current research into discourse and genre analysis of online genres, multimodality, language testing and validation in contemporary varieties of English. Email: mcambria@unime.it

Hafida Hamzaoui-Elachachi is senior lecturer at the Department of Foreign Languages at Abou Bekr Belkaid University of Tlemcen, Algeria. She is specialized in teaching English as a foreign language and has conducted several studies in this area, paying special attention to the development of writing skills and the exploration of language learning strategies. Her present interest lies in teaching English for Specific Purposes, and she takes part in projects working on the identification and analysis of learner needs and on course design in different ESP contexts. Email: hamzaouihafida@yahoo.fr

Bronwen Hughes lives and works in Naples. After years of working as a mother tongue language teacher at the University of Naples “L’Orientale”, she now also works as a contract professor at the University of Suor Orsola Benincasa where she teaches English for Tourism and National Heritage, and at the University of Sannio where she teaches English for Legal Studies. She was awarded her doctorate in Linguistics and Modern and Comparative Literature by the European School for Advanced Studies (a Centre of Excellence for doctoral and post-doctoral studies jointly established by the Universities of Naples “L’Orientale” and Suor Orsola Benincasa). Her research interests lie in the fields of translation as a tool for second language acquisition, cross-cultural media studies, and forensic linguistics. She is the author of Investigating Format: A Conversation Analytical Study of the Interview Room Scenes in The Bill and La Squadra, Rome, 2010. Email: bronwenhughes@yahoo.it

Alireza Jalilifar is associate professor of Applied Linguistics at Shahid Chamran University of Ahvaz, Iran. He has published in several international and national journals and has presented papers in many conferences. He has also published two theoretical books on genre analysis (Research Article in Applied Linguistics: A Genre-based Writing Guide, and Academic Research Genre in an Asian Context) and two reading books, one designed for general academic purposes and one for students of environmental sciences. Jalilifar has supervised more than 50 MA theses in Iran. His main interests are second language writing, genre analysis, and academic discourse. Email: ar.jalilifar@gmail.com

Chams-Eddine Lamri is an English teacher at Abou Bekr Belkaid University of Tlemcen, Algeria. He teaches English for Specific Purposes in the Department of Law and Political Sciences and in the Preparatory School of Science and Technology. He has also taught courses of Grammar and British and African Civilization in the Department of English language and literature. His research is focused on teaching English for legal purposes and the role of new technologies in promoting receptive language skills, which is the subject of his Doctorate research. He is a team member of the ESP Research Laboratory. Email: lamrichamseddine@yahoo.fr

Masume Hoseini Marashi has an MA in English Language Teaching. She received her BA in Translation studies and MA in English Language Teaching from Allameh Tabatabai University in Tehran. She currently teaches at Islamic Azad University, Abadan Branch. Her research interests are academic research writing and reading and English for Specific Purposes. Email: ma30.marashi@gmail.com

Alessandra Molino holds a PhD in English Studies obtained at the University of Turin in 2009. Her dissertation was a cross-cultural analysis of authorial references in Linguistics and Psychology Research Articles in English and Italian. Her research interests lie in the study of point of view in discourse, academic communication, specialized discourse, intercultural rhetoric and translation. Among her publications are 'A corpus-based study of certainty adverbials in argumentative essays in English by Italian university students', in Textus, XX, pp. 103-116 (2007); and 'Personal and impersonal authorial references: a contrastive study of English and Italian linguistics research articles', in Journal of English for Academic Purposes, 9(2), pp. 86-101 (2010). She currently holds the course of "English Language" at the Faculty of Psychology and at the Faculty of Economics at the University of Turin. Email: alessandra.molino@unito.it

Amir H. Y. Salama (PhD) received his MA in applied linguistics from the Faculty of Arts at Tanta University, Egypt. He is currently a Lecturer in linguistics and discourse analysis at the Department of English, Faculty of Arts, Kafr El-Sheikh University, Egypt. He is also Visiting Research Assistant at the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences (FASS) at Lancaster University, UK, where he obtained his PhD in linguistics with a doctoral thesis on Ideological Collocation in Meta-Wahhabi Dis- course Post-9/11: A Symbiosis of Critical Discourse Analysis and Corpus Linguistics. His academic interests are Critical Discourse Analysis, corpus linguistics, Systemic Functional Linguistics and lexical semantics. His article 'Ideological collocation and the recontextualization of Wahhabi-Saudi Islam post-9/11: a synergy of corpus linguistics and critical discourse analysis' was published in Discourse & Society in 2011. Email: amir.salama79@gmail.com

Viviana Soler graduated from the Universidad Nacional de La Plata, Argentina, as Certified Translator of the English Language and Teacher of English Language and Literature. She is currently member of the National Research Council (CONICET) at the Instituto de Investigaciones Bioquímicas de Bahía Blanca (INIBIBB), in Argentina, where she works as a scientific translator. Her activities as a scientific translator are complemented by research studies on highly advanced scientific discourse analysis at the Universidad Nacional del Sur (UNS) in Bahía Blanca, Argentina. Email: insoler@inibibb-conicet.gob.ar

Christopher Williams is full professor of English at the Law Faculty of the University of Foggia. His overriding research interest in recent years has been in legal English. Recent works include his forthcoming paper on 'Changes in the verb phrase in legislative language in English' in B. Aarts, J. Close, G. Leech & S. Wallis (eds.), The Verb Phrase in English: Investigation Recent Language Change with Corpora (Cambridge University Press), and Legal Discourse across Languages and Cultures (Peter Lang 2010), co-edited with Maurizio Gotti. He has also published works relating to tense, aspect and modality in English, including the Special Issue of English Language & Linguistics (2010) on 'Future Time Reference in English' co-edited with Ilse Depraetere. He is Chief Editor of the journal ESP Across Cultures. Email: cjwilliams72@hotmail.com