
Notes on contributors

Hmoud S. Alotaibi holds a PhD in Written Discourse from Texas A&M University-Commerce, Texas, USA, and an MA in English literature from Cleveland State University, Ohio, USA. He works as a Dean of Graduate Studies, and an assistant professor of English at Shaqra University, Saudi Arabia. His research interests are genre analysis, academic writing, and English for Academic Purposes. Email: halrwais@su.edu.sa

Patrizia Anesa is an Adjunct Lecturer at the University of Bergamo and teaches courses in the field of English Language and Translation at the same university. She holds a PhD in English Studies, with a specialization in professional communication and is a member of the Research Centre on Specialized Languages (CERLIS). Her research interests lie mostly in the area of specialized discourse, with particular reference to legal language and courtroom communication. She is currently interested in the analysis of arbitration practices, the applications of Conversation Analysis in LSP and the investigation of knowledge asymmetries in expert-lay communication. Email: patrizia.anesa@unibg.it

Fatemeh Asadnia is currently a PhD candidate of applied linguistics at Kharazmi University, Tehran, Iran. She has also been teaching some undergraduate ELT courses, as a guest instructor and on a part time basis, at Kharazmi University. Her areas of research include ESP, genre analysis, and teacher education. She has co-authored articles in national journals and has presented papers at national and international conferences. She is also co-authoring an EAP book for Iranian undergraduate students of architecture, to be published by SAMT. She has recently published papers in Iranian Journal of Applied Linguistics (IJAL) and Journal of Teaching Language Skills (JTLS). Email: asadnia.fatemeh@gmail.com

Mahmood Reza Atai is Professor of applied linguistics at Kharazmi University, Tehran, Iran, where he has been teaching post graduate courses on EAP, curriculum planning and materials development, and ELT in Iran and the World since 2000. He is also editor of the Iranian Journal of Applied Linguistics and has served as editorial board member in several international and national journals. His major areas of interest are EAP/ESP curriculum planning and course design, needs analysis, genre analysis, and teacher education and he has published on the relevant themes extensively in international and national journals. His recent publications have appeared in RELC Journal, Journal of Research in International Education, Teacher Development, Journal of Educational Computing Research, and English for Specific Purposes. Email: atai@khu.ac.ir

Gaetano Falco is a Researcher of English Linguistics and Translation at the University of Bari, Italy. His main research interests include Translation Studies, Translation

Teaching, Translation of LSPs, Critical Discourse Analysis, Cognitive Linguistics and Corpus Linguistics. In 2014, he published his monograph, Metodi e strumenti per l'analisi linguistica dei testi economici. Dalla SFG al Web 2.0. He has also published journal articles and book chapters on translation teaching, translation of economic discourse in professional and non-professional genres (e.g. academic journals, comic books, movies), and CDA-based studies on corporate discourse. Email: gaetano.falco@uniba.it

Irina Khoutyz is a Professor in linguistics and Head of applied linguistics and new information technology chair within the Department of Romance and Germanic Philology in Kuban State University (Krasnodar, Russia). Since 2016 she has supervised a post-graduate programme in cross-cultural communication in international academic environment. Her scope of research interest includes pragmatics, intercultural communication and discourse studies (in particular academic discourse). Email: ir_khoutyz@hotmail.com

Luisella Leonzini is an Adjunct Lecturer in English Language and Linguistics at the Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Milan. She works in the area of metaphor theory and analysis both in the verbal and in the visual modes. Her main research project has been examining both quantitatively and qualitatively metaphorical expressions used by The Economist to cover the economic and financial crisis of the euro. Her previous publications include studies in the field of teaching English as a Foreign Language, with a specific interest in the use of ELP as a tool to build proficient language learning. She has also investigated the power of extensive reading to develop intensive reading skills and investigated the approach of the CLIL project in secondary school to improve language skills. Email: leonzini@libero.it

Ian Robinson is a Researcher at the University of Calabria in the Department of Languages and Education. He teaches mainly in the degree courses for Social Work but also works extensively with the language centre. He has an MA in Applied Linguistics. He has been teaching English as a foreign language for more than twenty years, including several years in Greece, Japan, and now in Italy. His academic interests include teacher training, social and intercultural studies as well as corpus linguistics and assessment. He has published articles on these subjects. He has presented at conferences in various parts of the world including Italy, Japan, Cyprus, Belgium and the UK. Email: ian.robinson@unical.it