

---

Notes on contributors

Flavia Cavaliere is Associate Professor of English Language and Linguistics at the University of Naples Federico II and Director of the Scientific Area 'Multilingualism' within the Interdepartmental Research Centre 'LUPT' of the University of Naples 'Federico II'. Her research interests lie in the fields of Translation Studies, Language and Media, Multilingualism, Multimodal Discourse Analysis, and the use of Internet for English teaching. She has extensively published in these areas in international and academic journals and books and she regularly presents papers in international conferences and participates in various interdisciplinary research projects. Her most recent books include The Shaping of the News (2012), Mediterranean Heritage in Transit - (mis)representations via English (2016, co-edited with L. Abbamonte), Euromosaic, a Still Open Challenge (2017), Translation and Migration - Narratives of a Transition (2017), Thought for Food (forthcoming). Email: fcavali@unina.it

Massimiliano Demata is Associate Professor of English at the Department of Cultures, Politics and Society of the University of Turin. In 2014 he was Fulbright Visiting Researcher at Indiana University. He has worked extensively on political discourse: his monograph Representations of War and Terrorism. The Ideology and Language of George W. Bush was published in 2008, and he has recently published book chapters and journal papers on Trump's discourse on Twitter, Corbyn and left-wing populism, climate change, refugees and cybercrime. His current research focuses on populism and nationalism in the USA and multimodal discourse. Email: massimiliano.demata@unito.it

Daniele Franceschi, Ph.D., is currently a Researcher in English Language and Linguistics at the University of Roma Tre (Italy), Department of Languages, Literatures and Cultures. He teaches English linguistics, translation and theories of EFL learning both at an undergraduate and postgraduate level. His publications are in the field of multimodal teaching and learning, domain-specific discourse, cognitive linguistics, creative compounding and lexical/temporal semantics. He has attended as a speaker a number of international conferences and is an active member of ESSE (European Society for the Study of English), SLE (Societas Linguistica Europaea), IPrA (International Pragmatics Association) and AIA (Associazione Italiana di Anglistica). His monograph Ingressive and Egressive Verbs in English: a Cognitive-Pragmatic Approach to Meaning received the 2016 ESSE Book Award. Email: daniele.franceschi@uniroma3.it

Michela Giordano (MA in Linguistics, California State University, Long Beach) is an Associate Professor in English Language and Translation at the University of Cagliari. Since 2006, she has taught English (including ESP modules) in both BA and MA courses in the Faculty of Economic, Legal and Political Sciences and the Faculty of Humanities. Her research activity lies mainly in Applied Linguistics, ESP teaching methodology, discourse and genre analysis applied to academic, political and legal discourse. Her recent publications include: 18 Million Cracks in the Glass Ceiling. Language, Gender and Power in Hillary R. Clinton's Political Rhetoric (2012); "Let Us Be On the Right Side of History": Political Discourse and Rhetoric in the Classroom in Rassegna Italiana di Linguistica Applicata (2013); Crystal Mark, Clear Mark and Write Mark: Assessing Websites' Clarity and Usability Across Three English-Speaking Cultures in ESP Across Cultures (2014); Courtroom Discourse in Common-Law Contexts. Past and Present (2016). Email: mgiordano@unica.it

Rosita Maglie, Ph.D. (in Translation Studies), is a Researcher in English Language and Translation at the University of Bari Aldo Moro (Italy), where she teaches ESP and EAP to prospective psychologists and prospective primary teachers at undergraduate/postgraduate levels. Her research focuses on Corpus-Assisted Discourse Studies, Discourse Analysis, LSP, Applied Linguistics, and Psycholinguistics. Her most recent publications include the book The New Discourse of Healthcare. A Corpus and Discourse Analysis Approach to a Q&A Website (2015, Aracne); the chapters 'Can you read this leaflet?': User-friendliness of Patient Information Leaflets in the UK and in Italy (2015, Peter Lang) and Engaging with Online Communication-Based Medicine, Reframing Healthcare Delivery to Adolescents (2017, Ledizioni-LediPublishing); and the articles Go Ask Alice! The voice of medicine and the voice of lifeworld on a website (2017, International Journal of Language Studies) and Migrant Students' Attitudes to Trilingualism and Diversity (co-authored with M. Marcon, 2018, Journal of Applied Psycholinguistics). Email: rosita.maglie@uniba.it

Antonio Piga (PhD in Linguistics, University of Naples Federico II) is a Researcher in English Language and Translation at the University of Cagliari. He was a former lecturer in general Linguistics and Glottology at the Department of Linguistics and Stylistics of the University of Cagliari, and Lecturer in English Language and Linguistics at the Department of Modern Philology "Salvatore Battaglia" of the University of Naples Federico II. His primary research interests lie in contrastive Linguistics, code-switching, interlanguages, dialects, Italian language and Linguistics, institutional and interinstitutional language of the European Union, and English for Special Purposes (legal discourse, institutional discourse, and discourse of tourism). He is currently working on a research project about multimodality and social semiotics in Sardinian murals. His recent publications include: Towards a New Communication Policy: The Evolution of Communicative Strategies in the European Union (2013). Email: antoniopiga@gmail.com